

After 15 years in the game, Termanology is still going strong. His latest release will be his 35th project to date, and it is titled "Bad Decisions". The album is an ode to his past life and experiences before making a full time career in rap. Boasting 14 tracks filled with powerful production from some of Rap's greatest producers (Erick Sermon, Statik Selektah, Dame Grease, The Beatnuts & more), any fan of real hip hop would enjoy this piece of work.

Veteran MC's Raekwon and Smif-N-Wessun bring their signature flavor to the project while some of Rap's hottest new lyricists (Conway, Benny, ANoyd, Millyz & Crimeapple) come through and show why they have recently been given much praise. Term even tries his hand at production on the latter half of the album, producing three songs.

Look out for some videos and U.S. and European tours coming later this year to support the project.
